Have you ever wondered where the Mac Instructors & Supervisors get their smarts

Well, aside from spending lots of time on their Mac's, testing information written in the various books & manuals, and often referring to the Help program available in most apps, they also learn from the excellent Tutorials found online, some Free and some For Sale.

I will list a few of the best, and a random selection of subjects they offer to teach you. It would be worthwhile to take a look at the following websites to see just how helpful these Tutorials can be.

Let's begin by visiting the Home Page of:
www.macprovideo.com

click on Browse by Application,
click on Mac OS X,
click on Mac OS 10 101,

Mac OS 10 101

Find out what's what, what's where, and what things do what. These starter courses show you where things are located and how to get around your Mac.

Look at these Mac 101 Tutorials for starters:

- Give me the grand tour of Mac interface
- Get me working and playing
- Show me how to set up my Mac for me
- Connect peripherals, get on the Internet
- My Mac needs help
- My Mac Cheat Sheet

Also note, if you have switched to Mac from Windows, Switch 101 is a special Tutorial that was written just for you. The online Apple Tutorials are free.

You should also know about Anne Clark's highly recommended online Tutorials at:

www.lynda.com

look for Free Tutorials, then click on that line.

Explains how every one of the 825 courses offers a free sample video Tutorial so you can get an idea of the course. Simply go to the courses that you'd like to try out. You will notice the underlined Tutorials are available to watch without a membership.

For Beginners, free, good and has helpful starting information (although it should be updated): www.macforbeginners.com

You can also find more opportunities to view sources that offer courses and Tutorials, all intended to teach and help you understand the operation of your Mac computer. Do google search, type in: learning to use a Mac.
